WOMEN'S SELF DEFENSE TRAINING CAMP 2022

"A Women's Self Defense Camp" programme aimed at creating awareness among girl students (52) about self-defense techniques was organized from 6th April 2022 to 17th April 2022 in Amphitheater Basement 2, under the NSS Department. Participating as the Chief Guest after lighting the ceremonial lamp, Karate Black Belt Champion and Mr. Rakesh Thapa & B.com Coordinator Mr. Amol Bade addressed the girl students and said that girls were faced with many complex challenges in the present day society, with atrocities and violent against women being on the raise. They urged the girl students to be on the alert always and take care of their physical fitness by consuming nutritious food and cultivating healthy habits and regular physical exercise regimen.

The Demonstration Session:

After the inaugural session and felicitation ceremony, demonstration of the self defence technique followed under the command of Mr. Rakesh Thapa.

The tips he elaborated on how to self protect and defend are:

First tip: Prevention is the best self-defense- Attackers, whatever their objectives, are looking for unsuspecting, vulnerable targets. So be sure to follow general safety tips like being aware of your surroundings, only walking and parking in well-lit areas, keeping your keys in hand as you approach your door or car, varying your route and times of travel, and other personal security precautions. Apart from avoiding confrontation, if you can defuse a situation (talk someone down from physically assaulting you) or get away—by handing over your wallet/purse or whatever they want, do that. Hand over your money rather than fight. Nothing you own is worth more than your life or health. If violence is unavoidable, however, to really defend yourself, you'll want to know ahead of time how to fight back effectively—it's possible even against someone bigger or stronger than you.

Second tip: Get Loud and Push Back-As soon as the attacker touches you or it's clear that escape isn't possible, shout loudly (—BACK OFF!||) and push back at him or her. This does two things: it signals for help and it lets the attacker know you're not an easy target. It may not dissuade all attackers, but getting loud will warn off those that were looking for easy prey.

Third tip: Remember the Most Effective Body Parts to Hit-When you're in a confrontation, you only have a few seconds and a few moves to try before the fight may be decided. Before an attacker has gained full control of you, you must do everything you can— conserving as much energy as possible—to inflict injury so you can get away. So aim for the parts of the body where you can do the most damage easily: the eyes, nose, ears, neck, groin, knee, and legs. Depending on the position of the attacker and how close he is will determine where you will strike and with what part of your body you will employ. Do not step in closer, say, to strike his nose with your hand, when you can reach his knee with a kick.

Eyes: Gouging, poking, or scratching the attacker's eyes with your fingers or knuckles would be effective, as you can imagine. Besides causing a lot of pain, this should also make your escape easier by at least temporarily interfering with his vision.

Nose: If the attacker is close in front of you, use the heel of your palm to strike up under his nose; throw the whole weight of your body into the move to cause the most pain and force him to loosen his grip on you. If he's behind you, you can strike his nose (from the side or front) with your elbow. Either way, aim for the nasal bones.

Neck: The side of the neck is a bigger target, where both the carotid artery and jugular vein are located. You could possibly temporarily stun your attacker with a knife hand strike (all fingers held straight and tightly together, with thumb tucked and slightly bent at the knuckle) at the side of the neck.

Knee: Su says the knee is an ideal self-defense target, vulnerable from every angle and easily kicked without risk of your foot being grabbed. Kick the side of the knee to cause injury or partially incapacitate your attacker. Kicking the front of the knee may cause more injury but is less likely to result in imbalance.

Use your elbows, knees, and head. Those are the parts of the body that are most sensitive when hit. Now here are the parts of the body used most effectively for inflicting damage: your elbows, knees, and head (they're your body's bony built-in weapons).

Use everyday objects. Everyday objects you carry around with you or things in your environment can also be used to your advantage as weapons. Hold a key or pen between your middle and ring finger while you're walking home in the dark for more assurance. Outdoors, you can toss some dirt or sand into your attacker's eyes. Women are often told to spray perfume or hairspray into an assailant's eyes. The point is, use whatever you can to make your defense stronger (for more inspiration, watch some Jackie Chan movies).

Leverage your weight. No matter your size, weight, or strength in relation to your opponent, you can defend yourself by strategically using your body and the simple law of physics.

Different techniques to self defend against different forms of attacks are: Wrist Hold: What to do when an attacker has grabbed your wrist. Instead of pulling back to try to get out of the hold, squat down into a strong stance, then lean forward and bend your elbow towards him all the way towards his forearm until he can no longer hold onto your wrist. Here the point is to put strong pull either upwards or downwards depending upon where the thumb of the attacker points to. Demo on how to free from wrist hold Demo on how to free from wrist hold Demo on how to free from wrist hold Demo on how to free from wrist hold.

Stop an outside strike: This basic defense move protects you from strikes—or slaps, or punches, or waving batons—as an attacker approaches you from the front. As the attacker approaches, bring your arms out, fingers extended, elbows slightly bent. Stop your attacker by raising your forearm inside your attacker's oncoming arm—so he can't hit your face. At the same time, use your other hand to make a perfect fist and punch your attacker in one of the soft spots in the face: the nose, the jaw, or the throat—whatever is available. Use of fist for self defence when attacked from front Use of extended fingers to attack Also use palm, hand with the outer edge when striking a target on the upper half of the body you will use your hand. Effective strikes can be made with the outer edge of your hand in a knife hand position, a palm strike or knuckle blow for softer targets or a tightly curled fist. Using slaps to stop an attacker with full force Use of forearm to stop an attacker's oncoming arm.

Escape a bear hug: It's when someone approaches from behind and grabs you, pressing your arms against the sides of your body. Drop your weight and try to hit his head with your elbows or stomp his feet with your feet. If that doesn't work, pull his fingers back to force him to release you, rotate out of his hold, and attack him with your knees/kicks. Escaping a hug from behind. Use of elbows to free from bear hug Use an open palm, strike hard and fast until his grip releases. Lunge forward slightly, and throw your elbow back to your attacker's belly/chin, turning to face him as you do. Run if you can, or continue the assault with punches to soft spots. Use of legs & knees to release from bear hug Using elbow to strike attacker

Use of hand edges to counter strike an attacker: It is one of the very effective self-defense techniques which one should not miss. The main target for this technique is the neck and head, so it could be effectively used against anyone. Here you can hit the attacker's belly, neck, face, eye with the edges of your hand with full speed and force. The beauty of this technique is that it is simple, effective and easy to use even after almost no training and under a huge amount of stress and pressure. Hand edges to attack on belly Hand edges to strike on the face.

Valedictory session: A brief interaction of the training camp with the students followed after the demo session. A group of girl students interacted with the Principal & sports director about the different aspects of training imparted by the Trainer.

The vote of thanks was given by Mr. Atul Jadhav of the camp. Expressing her gratitude she thanked to Management, Vice Principal, Sports Director & the trainer of the camp. She also thanked NSS Department to organize such type of camp.
